

Common yarrow (Achillea millefolium): This member of the aster family has green, fern-like leaves and showy white blooms. Many insects feed on the nectar, pollen, and foliage of this plant, including flies, native bees, butterflies and moths. There are many cultivated varieties of this plant including the one shown below. Blooms April through September.

Achillea millefolium* ‘sunny seductions’

