

Showy goldenrod (Solidago speciosa): This goldenrod species features bright yellow flower clusters in a compact, erect, pyramidal column. It also has reddish stems and is one of the showiest species of goldenrod that occurs in the United States. People often mistake goldenrod for causing hay fever which is really caused by windblown pollen of other plants like ragweed. Blooms August through October.

