

Wild geranium (Geranium maculatum): Has showy, pink, five-petaled flowers that occur at the top of a leafy stem. Its seeds are eaten by birds and chipmunks. Nectar and pollen attract bumblebees, mason bees and other native bees as well as flower flies, and butterflies. Blooms April through May.

