

Cardinal flower (Lobelia cardinalis): This clump-forming perennial features erect, terminal spikes of large, cardinal red tubular flowers. It grows in moist locations along streams, swamps, and wooded areas. Butterflies and hummingbirds use it as a nectar source. Blooms July through September.

