

Turtle head (Chelone glabra): This erect, clump-forming perennial has flowers that resemble turtle heads. Bumblebees use it for pollen and nectar and it sometimes attracts ruby throated hummingbirds. It is also a larval host for the Baltimore checkerspot butterfly. Blooms August to October.

