

Wild indigo (Baptisia tinctoria): This plant has the same appearance as false indigo except with yellow flowers. It is of special value to native bumble bees, which feed on its nectar. It is also a larval host for butterflies and moths. Blooms April through June.

